Rydges Lakeside

Our Final Reunion Hotel

Rydges Lakeside on London Circuit, Canberra City is situated near the shores of Lake Burley Griffin. All rooms have views of either the Lake or City. Lifts service every facility we will utilize in the hotel – so there will be no problems with stairs or luggage.

Accommodation $160.00 per room per night (twin, double or single), Breakfast included. Most 458ers will be located near their mates.

Breakfast is served in “Bobby McGee’s” Restaurant located on the ground floor.

Other Meals You can dine in for evening meals or visit the many surrounding clubs and restaurants. Most evening meals & Thur/Fri lunches will be at your own expense. This will allow you to eat with friends at either the Hotel or surrounding restaurants. You can make block bookings in Rydges’ restaurants &/or announce an agreed time to eat together.

Bars - Cahoots Bar is on the Ground floor. It has interesting historical political photos & cartoons. Another small bar with a scenic view is located on the 15th floor.

Memorabilia You will find the 458 historical & memorabilia exhibition in Room 1320. If you have memorabilia to display, please find Jim Whitem who is Reunion Memorabilia custodian.

This room will be open for visitors as announced at the end of the program

Travel to Airport

You can take a $7 airport bus when leaving to go home.

Royal Bluebell

The Royal Bluebell was announced as the floral emblem of the Australian Capital Territory on 26 May 1982. Wahlenbergia gloriosa is a small perennial herb with oblong leaves about 2.5 cm long. The violet blue flowers are up to 2-3 cm in diameter and often appear to have a paler centre due to the light blue base of the petals combined with the purple style that ends in two white stigmas. The flowers may be erect or nodding and are carried on long slender stems. Royal Bluebell occurs mainly in sub-alpine woodland in the Australian Capital Territory, south-eastern New South Wales and Victoria. It is legally protected throughout its occurrence in the wild, but is relatively easy to cultivate.

You will see a stylised representation of this beautiful flower on your 458 final reunion dinner place name cards.

458 Squadron RAAF Final Reunion 30 October – 4 November 2005, at Rydges Lakeside, Canberra

458 Squadron Association will hold its final reunion in Canberra from 30 October to 4 November 2005. The Canberra reunion is the final one, as the veterans have recognised their numbers are dwindling and their health is no longer the health of youth. Even so, over eighty aircrew, ground crew and family members, from NZ and all states will spend nearly a week in Canberra.

Association members are scattered around the world, mainly in Australia, NZ, UK and Canada. Since the first national reunion in Sydney in 1953, members have held reunions on 36 occasions, in NZ, Canada, UK and all states of Australia. The Association's youngest veteran is 81 and many are in their nineties.

Hosted by the NSW Flight, the final 458 Squadron Reunion program focuses on remembrance while enjoying the company of old mates. During their time in Canberra members will hold a memorial service and wreath laying ceremony at the Australian War Memorial, followed by visits to some of the key attractions of the national capital, including the Canberra Exhibition at Regatta Point and lunch on a cruise boat on Lake Burley Griffin

An important event during the week is the 458 Squadron memorial plaque and tree dedication ceremony on Wednesday 2nd November at RAAF Memorial Grove, on the Federal Hwy at the Majura Road turnoff. Recognising the squadron's important role in the protection of Malta, His Excellency, the High Commissioner for Malta will be guest of honour at the dedication. RAAF Association members are very welcome to attend the service, which will begin at 11.00am. Following the ceremony, 458 veterans will attend a reception hosted by the High Commissioner for Malta.

History recounts Malta's suffering from the German Luftwaffe's heavy bombing, so the significance of 458 Squadron's contribution to the protection of Malta, a key strategic island in the middle of the Mediterranean, cannot be underestimated. Mick Singe, who will be attending the reunion, recalls the Germans bombed Malta up to 12 times a day. He lost several of his mates during the assault and was saddened by the women and children who had been without essential provisions for eight months, as Allied convoys had great difficulty in re-supplying the island. Mick and the other members of the squadron gave them food from their own rations whenever they could.

A key highlight is the 458 Squadron Final Dinner, which will be attended by senior air force personnel. To complete the week of reunion, 458 veterans will tour Old Parliament House.

Veterans will return home at the end of the week's celebrations confident that they will be remembered in our national capital, but a little sad that over 60 years of close and regular comradeship is coming to an end.

458 Squadron RAAF – Brief History

458 Squadron, Royal Australian Air Force, was formed at Williamtown, New South Wales, on 10 July 1941. Formed under Article XV of the Empire Air Training Scheme, the squadron was destined for operations in Europe. In early August, the 37 airmen then in it sailed for the United Kingdom, where they joined further personnel from across the British Commonwealth being gathered at Holme-on-Spalding Moor.

The squadron was equipped with Vickers Wellington bombers, widely nicknamed the "Wimpey" after the character in the Popeye cartoon strip, J. Wellington Wimpey. Wellingtons were the first bombers used to attack Germany in September 1939, but like all British bombers of the war they were lightly armed and suffered heavily from attacks by German fighters. In 1940 the Wellington squadrons were switched to night raids. The unique geodetic latticework construction of the Wellington made it particularly robust - able to sustain remarkable amounts of flak damage and yet still keep flying.

As part of 1 Group, Bomber Command, 458 commenced operations over German-occupied Europe on 20 October 1941. For the next three months the focus of the squadron's operations was the strategic bombing campaign against Germany. 458 Squadron is reputed to have been "congratulated almost continuously" for the highest serviceability in any bomber group in the United Kingdom.

In February 1942, the squadron was reallocated to Middle East Command. Its relocation was a chaotic affair, however its aircrews ferried all but one of its Wellington ICs safely to Egypt. The air and ground crew were separated and the squadron's aircraft were commandeered for operations by other squadrons from Malta, where they had stopped on their way to Egypt. Malta suffered heavy bombing from the German Luftwaffe, and the significance of 458 squadron's contribution to the protection of Malta, a key strategic island in the middle of the Mediterranean, cannot be underestimated.

Mick Singe, who will be attending the reunion, recalls the Germans were bombing Malta 12 times a day. He lost several of his mates there and was saddened also by the women and children who had been without many provisions for eight months, as Allied convoys found it hard to get through. Mick and the other members of his squadron gave them food from their own rations whenever they could. He also recalls the times they slept on the ground without sleeping bags and were moving so much there was no time to erect tents.

Finally arriving in the Middle East, the squadron's ground crew worked on the maintenance of bombers operated by the Royal Air Force (RAF) and the United States Army Air Force, while the air crew were attached to 37, 70, 104, 108, and 148 Squadrons RAF. Thus, many 458 aircrews almost completed an entire tour of duty without flying with the Australian Squadron. 458 Squadron was not reunited until 1 September 1942, at El Shallufa, in Egypt.

Based at El Shallufa, the squadron was re-equipped with Wellingtons. Its primary role was to seek out and attack enemy shipping in the Mediterranean Sea using bombs and torpedoes, and lay mines. A number of ships and German submarines were destroyed. In one mission, a 458 pilot force-landed his damaged Wellington four hundred miles behind enemy lines in North Africa. Four of the crew decided to evade capture and head for friendly territory. Over a period of twenty-two days, travelling in the cool of the evenings, they were eventually found by Allied troops in what was one of the most remarkable escapes of World War II.

458 Wellingtons operated from airfields in Egypt, Malta, Libya, Tunisia, Algeria, Sardinia, Corsica, and Italy. It also escorted huge convoys, sometimes, comprising as many as eighty-five ships, and this despite flooded aerodromes that sometimes compelled its Wellingtons to do their best to emulate flying boats. The squadron later bombed enemy shipping in and around the Gulf of Genoa, most notably in support of the Allied invasion of southern France in August 1944. It subsequently performed the same tasks in the Adriatic from captured Luftwaffe bases in Italy.

458 Squadron relocated for the final time, to Gibraltar, on 26 January 1945 and was treated to fresh fruit and vegetables for the first time in the war. With the occupation of southern France, and the continuing progress of the Allied campaign in Italy, enemy submarines and surface vessels in the Mediterranean presented little threat. From Gibraltar, the squadron roamed out across the western Atlantic, escorting Allied convoys and searching for German submarines. The squadron was still carrying out these tasks when the war in Europe ended on 8 May 1945. It disbanded on 9 June 1945.

Resurrection of a Wellington

Many former members of the RAAF will be delighted to hear that a Wimpy that lay on the bottom of a lake for 45 years has almost completely been restored. On New Year's Eve 1940, R for Robert took off from RAF Lossiemouth on a training flight. A subsequent engine failure together with heavy snow showers meant the aircraft could not return to base. It was necessary to land as soon as possible. The six trainees were ordered to bale out - sadly one was killed when his parachute failed to open properly. In due course the captain and co-pilot found a gap in the clouds and saw an expanse of water. They safely ditched on what turned out to be Loch Ness.

Forty-five years later in September 1985, R for Robert was recovered from the lake and transported back to Weybridge where it was originally built by Vickers. As you can imagine it looked a very sad and sorry sight when it emerged from the lake. Many parts had to be re-made including engines, turrets and major sections of the fuselage.

How has this miracle of restoration been achieved? Tribute should first be paid to the team of about 250 volunteers, men and women, who persevered with great dedication for 11 years expending nearly 96,000 man-hours. Much technical and collaborative help came from companies and organisations.

Perhaps the fact that R for Robert was capable of being restored after being submerged for 45 years is a further testimony to the enormous strength of its geodetic construction. It is ironic that the Wellington on display at the RAF Museum at Hendon is the sole survivor of the 11,461 Wellingtons built, that is, until R for Robert was reborn. It should be noted that the Wellington at Hendon was a training aircraft whereas R for Robert had actually seen operational service.

With the restoration of R for Robert almost complete this achievement will undoubtedly go down in British aircraft preservation history.

Anyone visiting England is advised to visit Brooklands Museum at Weybridge in Surrey and marvel at this gem of restoration. As one who did his tour on Wimpys I found my visit to Brooklands Museum an unforgettable emotional experience. (NB: 458 Sqdn. Assoc. donated $500 towards cost of doped fabric)

Media Advice

RAAF'S WARTIME BOMBER SQUADRON

RAN OUT OF ENEMY TARGETS

The RAAF's 458 Squadron in Coastal Command in the Middle East in WW2 was so successful in attacking the enemy it ran out of targets.

This commendation was made by the Commander of the Coastal Command Wing in North Africa, the RAF's Air Marshal Geoffrey Tuttle. He said he had never been so impressed with a unit such as 458 Squadron either before or since. "We were all engaged in finding and destroying enemy ships at a time when the enemy had begun to realise how good the opposition was. 458 Squadron was one of the main reasons why my Wing was taken off operations- the enemy ran out of ships".

The 458 Squadron Association will hold its final reunion in Canberra from 30th October to 4th November. Surviving members, now well into their eighties, feel that the time has come for a farewell to old mates and to make a tribute to those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

Among reunion events, will be the dedication of a commemorative plaque at the RAAF Memorial Grove, Federal Highway at 11am on Wednesday 2nd November. The ACT Division of the RAAF Association, "guardian" of the Grove, will assist with the service.

The High Commissioner for Malta, Dr Ivan Fsadni, will be Guest of Honour at the dedication ceremony at the Memorial Grove.

You are invited to send a reporter and photographer to the plaque dedication at RAAF Memorial Grove at 11am on Wednesday 2nd November.

Over 80 air crew and ground staff and families from all states and New Zealand will spend nearly a week in Canberra. Included in reunion events will be a wreath-laying ceremony at the Australian War Memorial.

A number of former pilots who continued flying after the war are attending and are available for interview. They are Laurie Crowley who operated an airline from Lae, New Guinea, Kevin George flying private aircraft in New Zealand and Jack Ellis who became an Australian airline pilot. Former squadron pilot, Colin Fereday OAM, has lived in Canberra since the 1930s. He has devoted much of his time to the RAAF Association which was one of the factors in his award of the Medal of the Order of Australia. Des Singe witnessed the continuous and shattering bombing of Malta with huge casualties and where he lost many mates.

458 Squadron was formed at Williamtown, NSW in July 1941 and transferred to Holme-on-Spalding Moor, England. Equipped with Wellington bombers it flew with Bomber Command over Germany until January 1942 when it was reallocated to Middle East Command. Based at El Shallufa with Wellington bombers it attacked German shipping and submarines in the Mediterranean Sea. It also operated from Egypt, Malta, Libya, Tunisia, Algeria, Sardinia, Corsica and Italy. The Squadron was finally located in Gibraltar and was disbanded when the war in Europe ended.

Opening Prayer

Chaplain Gary Whelband

139th Psalm (The Airman's Prayer)

Said by all

*Where can I go from your Spirit:
Or where can I flee from your presence?
If I climb up into Heaven, you are there:
If I make my bed in the grave, you are there also.
If I take the wings of the morning
Or remain in the uttermost parts of the sea,
Even there also shall your hand lead me
And your right hand shall hold me.*

Commemorative Address

Mr Jim Whitem
Secretary
458 Squadron Royal Australian Air Force Association

Prayers of Reflection and Commemoration

Chaplain Gary Whelband

The Lord's Prayer

Said by all

*Our Father in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.
Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven.
Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.
Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.
For thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory,
for ever and ever, Amen.*
